

Current recommendations in the treatment of aortic stenosis: (T)AVR in focus

Milena Pandrc¹, Mirjana Stanić¹, Vanja Kostovski², Danijela Vraneš¹, Snježana Vukotić¹, Andjelka Ristić¹, Nemanja Djenić¹

¹ Department of Urgent Internal Medicine, Military Medical Academy, Belgrade, Serbia; ² Clinic for Thoracic Surgery, Military Medical Academy, Belgrade, Serbia.

According to US data, one-third of all patients with aortic stenosis have severe aortic stenosis, as well as numerous comorbidities and comedication, and transcatheter intervention is the recommended treatment modality in cases where there is a primary indication for aortic valve replacement, as an equally effective and much safer technique compared to standard surgery.

Key words: aortic stenosis, heart failure, transcatheter aortic valve replacement